Tuesday

Dear Diary,

Later this evening, I will be going on an amazing fishing trip so I can learn how to help my dad and granddad. I can't wait to finally help them, I have waited so many years! Although I am excited, I am also very nervous because I am scared I won't be good enough at fishing and I won't be able to go again. Earlier, we prepared the boat for the trip to make sure that we had everything we needed. My dad is very organized but him and my granddad argued about how to pack things, they always argue!

Wednesday

WAGOLL

Dear Diary,

Surprisingly, my dad didn't tell me very much about our trip before we left this evening, so I just had to wait and see. On the long journey there I looked over the side of La Luna, our beautiful boat, while Dad rowed. I stared at the calm, deep-blue ocean but before long Dad stopped rowing and Granddad put the heavy, rusty anchor into the water so the boat wouldn't move. After this, Granddad gave me a present which I tore open excitedly...it was a hat! I was so pleased – now I would look just like dad and grampa! Although, they argued about which way I should wear it, I still loved my new hat. Slowly, Granddad turned down the light and I looked up at the sparkly, glistening stars.

Thursday

WAGOLL

For a few moments we sat still, until the large, glistening moon started to rise. Quickly, my dad gave me another rusty, heavy anchor so I went to put it into the water. But, before I could my granddad told me not to because I had to take it up the ladder. Could this not be a fishing trip? I tied the anchor around my waist hesitantly and climbed the ladder. As I began to float, I felt panicked, but I landed on the moon and saw hundreds of golden, shiny stars. Was there anything more beautiful than this? Slowly, my dad and granddad walked towards a small, old shed and took out a small trolley filled with brooms and other tools. I was very confused. They tried to give me a tool but again they kept arguing about which one I should use. Funnily, I realized that their brooms looked like their beards!

Friday

WAGOLL sentences

Right before my eyes, a huge, glistening star fell and rumbled the moon, so all the little stars made a clinking noise

Quickly, I thought of a brilliant plan, but I needed a strong hammer.

On the way back home, I felt thrilled for I had had an amazing, adventurous evening.
